ABSTRACT

Prosthetic restoration of implants is as, if not more important than the placement of the implant itself for optimal soft tissue outcomes and longevity.

No individual better understands the gingival phenotype, implant - gingivae interaction or the trans mucosal neck of prama than the treating clinician.

This course explores the use of immediate CAD restoration of Prama implants to manipulate soft tissue, how the clinician can use the available tools to maximise biocompatibility, and how direct chairside restoration of implants preserves the maximum possible soft tissue post implant placement.
